While While backward rovd my busy thought On deeds in distant ages wrought; On tyrants gloriously withstood; On seas dtstaind with Persian blood; Oa trophies raisd oer hills of flain In Marathons unrivald plain. Then, as around I cast my eye, And viewd the pleasing prospect nigh, The land for arms and arts renownd, Where wit was honourd, poets crownd Whose manners and whose rules resind Our fould, and civilizd mankind; Or (yet a loftier pitch to raise Our wonder, and compleat its praise) The land that e Platos master bore--How did my heart with joy run oer! Now coasting on the eastern side, We peepd where Peneus rolls his tide: Where Arethusa came t appease The shepherd that had lost his bees, And led him to Cyrenes grott; Tis a long tale, and...
