There is hardly a single country in Europe that does not make the most liberal provisions for the education of its people in such things, and they acknowledge that it is the secret of wealth. Mainly through our public schools, by the study of some broad system of Industrial Drawing, by means of Free Evening Art Schools, for mechanics and artisans, will the United States take its proper position and maintain its prosperity. Our general government, not having direct control in the States, cannot provide for these things, as is done abroad, so it rests upon the several States to come forward, especially those like...
